

Signals From Setup

What twelve operations leads taught us about first-week activation

Confidence before access

Participants wanted to see a realistic result before granting broad data permissions.

Language mismatch

Internal terms such as workspace and source did not match how teams described their own process.

Design direction

Start from an editable sample, explain each connection in context, and show a clear undo path.

12 Teams understand the product promise quickly, but hesitate when asked to connect live systems before seeing a useful output. A safer sample-first path would build confidence and improve activation.

Value

Participants wanted to see a realistic result before granting broad data permissions.

88

Trust

Internal terms such as workspace and source did not match how teams described their own process.

54

Clarity

Start from an editable sample, explain each connection in context, and show a clear undo path.

63

Control

Participants wanted to see a realistic result before granting broad data permissions.

72

